Jesus and the Cross Reflections of Christians from Islamic Contexts

The papers in this volume are organised in three parts: scriptural, contextual and theological. The central question being addressed is: how do Christians living in contexts, where Islam is a majority or minority religion, experience, express or think of the Cross? This is, therefore, an exercise in listening. As the contexts from where these engagements arise are varied, the papers in drawing contextual and theological reflections offer cross-section of Christian thinking about Jesus and the Cross.

Jesus and the Incarnation Reflections of Christians from Islamic Contexts

In the dialogues of Christians with Muslims nothing is more fundamental than the Cross, the Incarnation and the Resurrection of Jesus. An open and honest conversation on these is a necessity as Christians all over the world meet with Muslims on a daily basis. Building on the volume on the Cross, this book contains voices of Christians living in various 'Islamic contexts' and reflecting on the Incarnation of Jesus. The aim of these reflections is constructive and the hope is that the papers weaved around the notion of 'the Word' will not only promote dialogue among Christians on the roles of the Person and the Book but, also, create a positive environment for the conversations with Muslim neighbours.

Jesus and the Resurrection Reflections of Christians from Islamic Contexts

The third and the final volume in the series on Jesus focuses on the Resurrection. It acknowledges the history of the conflict between the Christian witness that Jesus died/rose again and the traditional Islamic witness that Jesus did not die but was taken to heaven by God. The main idea running through this volume, however, is that in the believers' preoccupation with the memory and experience of this conflict one fact common to both Christian and Muslim believers runs the risk of being ignored altogether: that Jesus is alive. As has been the case with the first two volumes, this volume will contain 'reflections' of both Christian scholars and practitioners from 'Islamic contexts' on the meaning and experience of Jesus and his resurrection. (Due in 2012)

Civilisations in Conflict? Islam, the West and Christian Faith, J Andrew Kirk

Samuel Huntington's thesis, which argues that there appear to be aspects of Islam that could be on a collision course with the politics and values of Western societies, has provoked much controversy. The purpose of this study is to offer a particular response to Huntington's thesis by making a comparison between the origins of Islam and Christianity; the two religions that can be said to have shaped, in contrasting ways, the history of the Western world. The early history of each faith continues to have a pro-way in which their respective followers have interpreted the relationship between faith and political life. The book draws significant, critical and creative conclusions from the analysis for contemporary intercultural understanding, and in particular for the debate about the justification of violence for political and religious ends.

Revisoning Christian Unity

Huibert van Beek, Editor

"The most important aspect of the forum is that, in deep and direct human encounters, we have found Christ in each other. It has confirmed to me that we are being led by the Holy Spirit to deepen our commitment to unity. This is the hour of His grace, if only we would listen".

Regnum Studies in Mission

The Regnum Studies in Mission series is born out of the lived experiences of Christians and Christian communities-in-mission, especially in the fast growing churches among the poor of the world. These churches have more to tell than just stories of growth. Their work is making a significant impact in shaping their cultures in the power and image of Christ. Through Regnum, these practitioners are expressing the reality of the Christian faith as it is manifested in their societies and making the work of God known, globally.
